HIGH SCHOOL IS LAID OVER

North Side Man Warns Associates They Will Hear of High School Every Meeting Hereafter

An unsuccessful fight against the free bridge, led by Alderman Roellig of the Eleventh ward and supported by Aldermen Grover, Kemper and Rice of the north side, and Alderman Schneberger of the Eighth ward was made in the city council last night, in one of the longest drawn out and stormiest sessions held in La Crosse for years.

The bridge was finally voted free for a period of two years, the vote being 15 to 7 for adoption of the Smith ordinance, which provides that in case at the expiration of the two years time limit, Minnesota or Houston county has taken over the La Crosse highway and substantially repaired it and adopted it as a state or county highway, then the bridge shall be free forever.

The ordinance goes into effect September 1.

Alderman Roellig, who introduced the original resolution to place the bridge matter before a referendum vote of the people, said last night he had done so with the condition stated that in case the people voted in favor of a free bridge, the councilmen were not bound to act in accordance with the vote. He declared he was unwilling to accept the vote and argued that a total of $100,000 in bonds at a carrying annual interest of 4 per cent, is still outstanding on the cost of constructing the bridge.

Torrence Corrects Figures

Alderman Torrence pointed out that about 80 per cent of the great bond issue toward which the Alderman from the Eleventh pointed, had already been paid into the sinking fund by the city and is drawing interest at the rate of 3 per cent. In five years, he said, the entire debt will be wiped out.

Charges Corrupt Practice

Alderman Mahoney supported Roellig, declaring that in the referendum election unfair tactics had been employed by the committee having charge of the bridge campaign.

Charges Corrupt Practice

He said its members were liable to criminal prosecution under the corrupt practices act, asserting that they had hired solicitors to go out and get votes, and asserted furthermore that a La Crosse newspaper had printed a special edition of its paper and circulated it over the north side, threatening north side residents that in case there was an unfavorable vote on the bridge the north side would not get its high school.

They took this out of the papers that were run on the south side, he said, "so you aldermen from the south side don't know about their methods."

Following this announcement, Alderman Mahoney declared he was going to vote for the free bridge anyway. "I am going to vote with the people," he explained.

Committees reported in favor of laying the high school ordinance on the table for a period of one year. Mr. Mahoney made a motion to lay on the table the committee report which recommended retiring the ordinance.

This would have allowed the high school fight to be renewed at any subsequent council meeting. It was lost and the original resolution prevailed.

MacWillie Controversy Up

"Well, do as you please about it," exclaimed Alderman Mahoney. "You'll hear from this high school matter every council meeting for the next year. We are not going to let it drop."

Alderman Kemper, following the retirement of the high school ordinance, brought an ordinance providing that means for construction of the school be placed in the budget for 1915 in the sum of $25,000 to be

Dr. Dernburg Reported About To Leave Country

Dr. Bernhard Dernburg.

NEW YORK, May 15.—With a rumor current that he had made plans to return to Germany in a few days, Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, remained in seclusion at his apartment in the Ritz Carlton today. His secretary answered all telephone calls and refused to discuss the rumor. "Dr. Dernburg has nothing to say," was the only statement forthcoming.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Of reports that Dr. Bernhard Dernburg had been ordered to leave the United States or that he was about to leave the country voluntarily soon, nobody in Washington who was likely to be in touch with the German visitor's plans would admit having heard anything today.

The first of these rumors was everywhere discredited, the government having definitely decided that the case was not one for diplomatic action. Men high in the administration have not concealed their opinion that the doctor was a disturbing element and that they wanted him to quit the country. Whether any definite intimation to this effect had been given him they would not say. Secretary Bryan said today that no "official" action had been taken, leaving the question open whether or not there had been "unofficial" steps.

Dr. Dernburg's public comments, especially since the killing of Americans on the Lusitania, have been extremely offensive to President Wilson, Secretary Bryan and other high officials of the government.

Dr. Dernburg approved of the sinking of the Lusitania and said he favored further acts of the same character on the part of the German government.

WAR-CRAZED ITALIAN MOBS FORCE KING TO CALL ON PARLIAMENT

MILITARY UNABLE TO CONTROL RIOTS AGAINST GERMANS

Business Closes Down as Mobs Parade Clamoring for Intervention

ROME, May 15.—To head off possible civil war, King Victor Emanuel today signed a decree convoking the chamber of deputies early next week, according to a report from authoritative sources. The king acted on advice of leaders of both the warring interventionists and neutral factions. Serious rioting by mobs favoring war broke out afresh today and the king was told the situation was rapidly getting beyond control of the military.

Parliament was not scheduled to meet until next Thursday. Because of the crisis precipitated by the unexpected resignation of the Salandra cabinet, the king has determined to call the deputies together Monday.

or Tuesday, it was authoritatively stated. The decree has not yet been made public.

Whole sections of Rome were under mob control today, the military and police apparently unable to suppress the demonstrations. The entire city was seething with war talk. Business houses were closed and despite the activity of cavalry patrols crowds marched through the streets shouting: "Down with Germany! Down with the Kaiser! Down with Franz Josef!"

For the second time within 24 hours a mob of interventionists invaded the parliament building, smashing windows and wrecking furniture. From the parliament building the mob again attempted a march to the royal palace. Two cavalry squadrons guarding the approaches, rushed the crowd repeatedly and drove them back. Several persons were injured. An angry crowd attacked the motor car of the German deputy, Erzberger, smashing in the windows. The mob pressed in about the limousine, shouting:

"Death to the Germans! To the frontier with the barbarians!" Erzberger escaped by speeding through the crowd.

BURGLARS ENTER FIVE RESIDENCES WITH POOR LUCK ONLY $16 BOOTY

In John Elliott's Shoes the Marauder Leaves Tracks in Home of F. H. Burgess, Eleventh Street

WATCH AND MONEY TAKEN

L. H. Martin's Silverware Left by Robbers Who Seek Money in Safe; Police Have No Clue

Five La Crosse homes in the best residence districts were entered through open windows last night, and an attempt was made to break the lock of another residence.

About $16 in cash, a valuable watch and chain, and a pair of shoes is the entire loss reported to the police today.

The residences entered are: Stephen Gantert, 1304 Main street. L. H. Martin, 1004 Cass street. Congressman John J. Esch, 117 South Thirteenth street. F. H. Burgess, 137 South Eleventh street. John Elliott, 1414 Main street. Residence where attempt was made.

R. J. Ray, 928 King street.

All burglaries reported to the police cover a territory of but ten city blocks. The neighborhood in which robberies were committed is bounded by Cass street on the south; Fourteenth street on the east; Main street on the north, and Tenth street on the west.

The police detailed special men on the work of rounding up every suspicious looking character in the city, but late this afternoon were without a single clue of value to them.

Stole John Elliott's Shoes

It is the belief that the home of John Elliott, 1414 Main street, was the first entered. One of the thieves proceeded to protect himself against detection by stealing Mr. Elliott's shoes. He left Elliott's tracks elsewhere.

"We retired rather early," said Mrs. Elliott to a TRIBUNE representative today, "and were not aware that the house had been robbed until this morning." Gaining entrance to the Elliott home through an unlocked window on the first floor, left unlocked by painters, the thief (it is believed that there was only one at the Elliott home) ransacked the down stairs rooms, opening drawers and searching every bit of furniture.

A small purse containing $2.50 was taken from a table in the dining room. The second floor, where Mr. and Mrs. Elliott were sleeping was then entered. Mr. Elliott's clothing which had been left in the bath room was found this morning down stairs.

Mr. Elliott's watch and chain, valued at about $75; $14 in cash, and his shoes were missing. Mr. and Mrs. Elliott were not awakened.

Heavy Footprints Found

Thieves entered the home of Congressman John J. Esch, 117 South Thirteenth street, sometime between midnight and morning, taking only a child's purse containing seventy-five cents. The lower floor of the house was pillaged, but nothing was taken.

Heavy footprints, thought to have been made by Mr. Elliott's shoes, worn by the thief who broke into his home, were found about the F. H. Burgess residence, 137 South Eleventh street, this morning. A window which had not been opened by the family for a long time was pried up and articles in the rooms on the lower floor were disturbed.

A large quantity of silverware in a safe at the home of L. H. Martin, 1004 Cass street, was rejected by thieves who entered through a window on the east side of the home. The silver was scattered in a search for money.

When R. J. Ray, 928 King street, returned home last night, his key, which had been used by him for years, would not fit in the lock, and this morning it was found that the lock had been broken by an instrument which the police are led to believe was used in trying to enter the house.

KAISER TO INSIST ON U. S. INTERDICT OFFOODBLOCKADE BY THE BRITISH?

Prominent German in Washington Believes That This Compromise Will Be Suggested

SUGGESTS GERMAN TIME LIMIT

Holds That German Government Will Suspend Submarine Warfare for a Month to Allow Action

Editor's Note: Expectations of a peaceful solution of the submarine controversy upon the basis of the German proposal discussed in the following story are doubtless doomed to disappointment. Unquestionably the president went over this ground before writing his note to Germany, and its absence from the note evidences its elimination from consideration. The administration has assumed an unmistakable and definite position. It has decided that Germany shall not dictate America's treatment of the English abridgement of American rights. It deals with the German situation as a distinct subject to which other problems are irrelevant.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—German here think the Kaiser's reply note—due here about next Friday or Saturday, according to the calculations of the German embassy—will bear out their prediction that the upshot of the present situation will be peace rather than war.

At the embassy silence was maintained, but from a German in close touch with the Kaiser's diplomatic affairs this statement was obtained: "I look for the German note to contain this suggestion:

"Germany will abandon the submarine warfare complained of for a certain length of time—say a month or three weeks—providing the United States takes the same position regarding England's unfair starvation policy. In that three weeks or more the United States would be expected to make the proper representations to England and to make them in positive fashion."

According to this authority Germany proposed this solution of the question two months ago. To the objection that this would savor too much of bargaining for the hiring of a nation to do the right thing, he answered:

"All diplomatic negotiations are bargainings."

The proviso must be part of Germany's answer, he declared, because otherwise the German people would not support the government.

As for America's indisputable rights to go anywhere on belligerent vessels as declared in the American note, "that at least is an open question," said the authority quoted. "When a man says that it means he must be able to prove he had such a legal right. The Lusitania was carrying reservists. If I am not mistaken, you will find a United States supreme court decision under which the Lusitania thereby laid itself open to all the risks incurred by an army transport. The fact that she was carrying a comparatively small number of soldiers does not make her position different from what it would have been had she been carrying a thousand."

"YES" OR "NO" REPLY WITHOUT DISCUSSION WILSON EXPECTATION

Note is Delayed in Transit But is Believed Now to be in Berlin—Washington More Hopeful Today

EDITOR'S NOTE—The suggestion of arbitration as to past injuries may meet with approval in Washington, but probably it will not be entertained as to the essential demand in President Wilson's note that submarine warfare on merchant ships be discontinued. This government is likely to take the position that you can't arbitrate with a man who is shooting you. Should the German proposal provide for suspension of submarine attacks on merchant ships pending arbitration, Washington may reply that the only purpose of arbitration would be to repeal or modify the very law which the state department believes establishes the right the United States is seeking to defend, and thus undermine America's legally fortified position. As we read it, the note leaves nothing to arbitrate as to its essential demand. It cites the law, points to its violation and insists upon its future observance. If the administration maintains its position, the answer must be in one word of one syllable.

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, May 15.—Germany is willing to submit her side of the Lusitania case to a court of arbitration, according to the Vossische Zeitung, which today printed the following statement:

"High government circles in Germany favor submitting the Lusitania matter and the difficulties with America to a court of arbitration."

Ambassador Bernstorff may be given immediate instructions to suggest arbitration to America. It is the belief in official circles here, the newspaper said, that Germany shall make prompt answer to the American note before proceeding with her policy of torpedoing merchant steamers carrying passengers.

Public opinion here is greatly inflamed over the attacks on Germans in London, following the sinking of the Lusitania and the British government order for the internment of Germans in England. The newspapers here today declared England is wreaking vengeance on helpless civilians solely because she was powerless to act against Germany in a military way. Some of the newspapers advocate reprisal against English civilians and officers interned in Germany.

The newspaper Vossische Zeitung is an organ of the Liberal party in Germany. It can in no way be recognized as an official organ of the German government which usually speaks through the North German Gazette.

(BY JOHN EDWIN NEVIN, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Although satisfied in his own mind that the German government now has before it the Wilson note stating America's position on submarine warfare, Secretary Bryan said at noon today he had no official word to that effect.

The last news he had was that the note had not reached Berlin up to seven o'clock Friday night (1:00 p. m. Washington time, May 14) but the secretary explained that there was usually 24 hours delay on the transmission between here and Berlin and that he felt very confident the message was handed to the foreign office by Ambassador Gerard today.

With President Wilson at sea on his way to New York, and Secretary Bryan "sitting on the lid," official Washington could only speculate concerning the negotiations' outcome. The general feeling was hopeful—far more hopeful than the American demand's tenor seemed to warrant. The unanimous declaration by the leading British and French newspapers that Germany would defy the United States seemed to many officials here a good reason to take the opposite view. They felt there was little doubt, that the allies were earnestly hoping for a break, aligning the leading neutral nation against Germany, and it was believed here that Germany would take cognizance of this attitude in determining what to do.

TRANSYLVANIA IN WAR ZONE TODAY

Anchor Liner with 876 Passengers on Board Well Inside the Danger Limits

NO WORD SINCE SHE SAILED

Explained That She Was Ordered Not to Use Wireless Because of Enemy's Ships

NEW YORK, May 15.—The Anchor liner Transylvania carrying 876 passengers bound for Liverpool and Glasgow, was believed in steamship circles to be well within the war zone this morning. No word has been heard from her since she sailed off the Irish coast later this afternoon and reach Liverpool tomorrow. Because of the presence of enemy vessels in the war zone it was stated the wireless was resorted to as infrequently as possible.

ELGIN BUTTER MARKET

ELGIN, Ill., May 15.—Butter sold today at 25 1/2 to 26 1/2 against 27 1/2 to 28 cents last week.

Suggestions were not very favorably received here that the United States and Germany agree to prohibit transportation of munitions on passenger ships, this government applying to water traffic the rule against transportation of explosives on passenger trains. Secretary Bryan said he had not considered the matter and would not do so. Inasmuch as America's authority ends at the three mile limit, officials did not think the proposition could be carried out.

The United States, it was officially stated, does not expect Germany will attempt to enter on a long period of diplomatic discussion over the Wilson note. Some points were said to be open to further representations, but the great central concrete idea—that American citizens shall be free to go and come on the high seas wherever their business calls them—was declared to be open to no discussion—only a "yes" or "no" reply. It was known that this is what President Wilson expects.

Germany, to do this must abandon, at least temporarily, her submarine warfare against passenger-carrying vessels, and on this decision the entire case rests.

Suspense concerning Germany's attitude toward America's uncompromising opposition to submarine warfare, except as applied to warships, will continue at least a week. Officials today pointed out that it would be useless to look for an answer short of that length of time. It may even be longer, the principles involved being so far reaching that the Kaiser and his advisors may be depended upon to examine all precedents before framing any reply.

So far as this government is concerned, there will not be a single official utterance on the subject in

QUITE ANOTHER HELENA

BY KEITH KENTON

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
"Helena to spend the summer with us?" chirruped Mr. Anthony Dorr, as his brother Benjamin reached the end of the letter.

"Impossible!" decided David Dorr as he helped himself to another muffin. "I don't know what Isabel can be thinking of to inflict a tomboyish young girl upon us. Mrs. Muffet would give notice at once."
"There—there—boys," soothed Anthony as his gray-haired brothers assumed an aggressive attitude. "Helena is not tomboyish—she is merely fond of athletics. Isabel says if the child can have a horse to ride and some one to play tennis with she will be perfectly happy and contented. You see, Jonas and Isabel must go to Montreal at once and their summer plans are all upset and we are Helena's uncles and—"

"Let her come, then!" groaned Benjamin.

"Well, I'm here!" called a gay young voice just outside the door. The three elderly bachelors turned from the breakfast table and viewed with amazement a very pretty young person who now stood in the doorway regarding them with a pair of wonderful violet eyes.

"Well, uncles dear," she pouted. "I'm homesick already! Not one of you seems to be glad to see me; and I've traveled miles just to be with you." Tears appeared in the violet eyes.

"Why—why—why?" faltered Uncle Anthony, jumping from his chair and moving toward the newcomer with outstretched hands. "We are delighted, my dear—only you did surprise us. I only received your mother's letter an hour ago."

"I suppose father forgot to mail it. It was written a week ago and I—we all wondered why you didn't answer. I told them I supposed you were so paralyzed with joy at my coming that you simply couldn't reply. Well, here I am. Now, what are you going to do with me?" She regarded them whimsically.

"First have some breakfast," invited Uncle David, pecking a kiss at her cheek.

Uncle Benjamin rang for Mrs. Muffet, whose disapproving expression did not dissolve even beneath the warmth of Helena's dazzling smile.

"Another plate, please, Mrs. Muffet," directed Uncle Anthony. "Will you have a chop, Helena, my dear?"
"If you please, Uncle—oh, dear, it's no wonder I can't tell you apart when I haven't seen you in dozens and dozens of years!"

"Not since you were five, Helena," corrected Uncle David gravely. "And you must be—let me see: why, bless me child, you are seventeen!"
"I'm as old as I look—or as young uncles dear—only tell me, please, which one of you is which?"

Then Helena Strang was properly introduced to her three charming granduncles, who proceeded to enjoy her youthful enthusiasm to the utmost.

Uncle Anthony loved to recite his favorite poems to Helena, and in her he found a gentle, appreciative listener. Uncle David challenged her to a mighty game of chess and was highly delighted when she vanquished him, as she frequently did. It was Uncle Benjamin who was the sportsman of the family, and together he and Helena drove each day to the country club and tramped over the golf course, becoming, in due time, delightfully chummy.

Then the three old gentlemen conceived a plot to marry Helena to one of their neighbors, Jack Lyman, an altogether desirable young man who, on his part, lost no time in falling in love with the fascinating grand-niece.

It was about this time that a remarkable change took place in Helena. Something seemed to have dampened her high spirits, and she went about with a depressed and half-frightened look on her charming face. All the granduncles noticed it, and, finally, Mrs. Muffet was called in consultation.

"I might consult her disease as a guilty conscience," Mrs. Muffet diagnosed, with a sour smile.

"Mrs. Muffet," roared the three old gentlemen in chorus. Then Uncle Anthony arose in his most dignified manner and informed his housekeeper that if she would step into the library he would pay her up to the first of the year and that Amos would drive her to the station at once.

"I'll go," said Mrs. Muffet angrily, "but before I do leave I'd like to ask one question—how is it that Miss Helena came here twelve years ago with a pair of beautiful brown eyes—and now her eyes are blue—blue as violets?"

The trio of uncles gasped.

"Fiddlesticks!" ejaculated Uncle Benjamin, first to recover.

"They are very blue indeed," murmured Uncle Anthony, tenderly.

"I've heard that the eyes of infants frequently do assume another color in after years," defended Uncle David.

"Miss Helena was no infant when she came here before, sir," returned Mrs. Muffet grimly. "She was five years old, for I was chambermaid then and I took care of her. Her eyes were brown like her mother's and her hair was the same color—and she gave no promise of looking like this one. If you'll excuse my saying so, she couldn't be as handsome!"

"Then—then, who is our Helena?" demanded Uncle David fiercely.

"An impostor!"

"Absurd!" almost shrieked the three uncles in concert, and Mrs.

Muffet was allowed to depart under suspended sentence of dismissal until they could investigate the case of the niece whose relationship to them she had so boldly questioned.

"What shall we do?" asked Uncle Anthony, feebly, when they were alone.

"Let us get the truth," said Uncle Benjamin firmly.

So they went in a body into the garden on their distasteful errand.

They came upon her suddenly at the turn of a corner arbor. Jack Lyman was with her, and what the would-be inquisitors saw made them forget their errand.

The young people did not see the anxious old faces—they were too deeply absorbed in the telling of a wonderful story whose setting should always be in a rose garden.

Guiltily the granduncles tiptoed back to the house. "I will give the news to Isabel and ask their consent," whispered Uncle Anthony.

At which his brothers blushed rosy red, for they knew what that meant. It would soon be known to them whether they had indeed been entertaining their grandniece or an impostor, as Mrs. Muffet had charged.

"She is a dear child, anyway," declared Uncle David gruffly, and the others nodded assent.

Uncle Anthony scratched off a telegram, of which the others approved: "Helena is quite well and wants your consent to her engagement to Jack Lyman, our particular friend."

"We should receive a reply by dinner time," said David as he prepared to take the telegram to the station.

Helena did not make her appearance until half an hour before dinner. She pleaded a headache, and she looked quite pale and drooping when she came down stairs and joined the waiting trio on the veranda.

Mrs. Strang's telegram arrived almost precisely at the same moment. Uncle Anthony opened it with shaking fingers and read:

"Are you crazy? Helena is with me and ill with whooping cough, an absurd ailment for a girl of seventeen. Will write. ISABEL."

Without a word the distressed old man passed the message to David, who read it in grim silence and then handed it to Benjamin.

Helena stood before them, her eyes looking like drowned blue violets in her pale face.

"I have something to tell you, all," she began with a catch in her voice. "I have told Mr. Lyman—Jack—and he has forgiven me. I hope you will, too, for I love you all so dearly!"

"What is it, my dear?" asked Uncle Anthony compassionately.

Helena slipped to her knees and hid her face in his lap.

"I am not Helena Strang," she confessed tearfully. "I am quite another Helena—Helena Clifton. I have been Mrs. Strang's private secretary for several years—I am twenty-four. I never had a home. I was brought up in an orphan asylum and when I was old enough to go out into the world I found a place in a store and worked until I could save money enough to take a business course; when I was competent Mrs. Strang employed me."

"When she decided to go to Montreal she gave me six months' vacation."

BESS'S PARSIMONY FORCED THE MASQUE TO GO OUT-DOORS

Queen Elizabeth's Stinginess Gave the Dancing Pageant Most Enjoyable Feature

(By Howard Mumford Jones)

Passing over the brief reign of Edward VI we note that the first masque recorded in Elizabeth's is interesting for peculiar reasons. In the first place it was given in honor of the French gentlemen attending Mary, Queen of Scots, and in the second place it presented, of all subjects under the sun, the parable of the wise and foolish virgins. Unfortunately we don't know much more about it. Among the papers of Lord Burleigh, there remain plans for many other entertainments to be given in honor of the Scottish queen, but unluckily the most celebrated women's quarrel in authentic history broke out just then and the entertainments were never presented.

Elizabeth was not given to lavish spending and the masque did not develop in her reign. But it did develop, it changed. Hitherto it had been an indoors spectacle, presenting abstracts in human form, gorgeously clothed and against a gorgeous background, a pageant-wagon usually, or "float," as we would call it. But the parsimony of Elizabeth accomplished a change—it drove the masque out of doors, the best thing that ever happened to it. Dancing was necessarily minimized and the opportunity for gorgeous display cut down. The result was what was usually called "an entertainment," meaning by that some sort of a complimentary address or dialogue between characters, intended to flatter visiting royalty or nobility. George Peele wrote two or three of these things, and so did Gascoigne and other poets. A characteristic thing would be this: as Elizabeth of a fair afternoon was wandering about the grounds of some country house, a faun would dart out of the woods and present her with an address, or a company of country swains would flatter her and then dance—it was all very simple and imprinted on the masque an outdoor atmosphere which it never lost.

But, if the actual masque stood still during Bess's reign, we have at least one work whose reading will give the most vivid impression of what these vanished spectacles were like. This is The Faerie Queene. Nobody reads the Faerie Queene nowadays, and it is the more our loss. The pageants described in here, the allegorical figures, the splendid costumes and enchanted castles, the trappings and the fairies and the dwarfs, depict more brilliantly than prose ever can exactly the spirit and atmosphere of the masque. It isn't necessary to read all the poem to find these passages, dip in anywhere and you will find yourself in the very heart of a masque, the most gorgeous and elaborate and brilliant the world has ever known.

Besides Spenser's masterpiece, Elizabeth's reign produced another work of art which will give the modern reader very much the same effect of loveliness and brilliance. This is George Peele's The Arraignment of Paris, which is neither a play nor a masque nor a spectacle, but stands unique in English literature, the loveliest dramatic work that all the Elizabethan period produced. It is steeped in the sensuousness and poetry of the Renaissance; its lines are as liquid as a brook, and it breathes a fragrance as fresh now as when Peele first wrote it down. It has the advantage over Spenser, beside, that it was actually produced. Very similar plays much influenced by the Italian pastoral drama were written by Lyly and Greene, but none of them are quite like it and certainly none of them approach it in beauty.

We have then, the masque first as a kind of brief pageantry, or dramatized allegorical situation, then as a masked Italian drama, then as a combination of the two, and lastly in Elizabeth's time as an outdoor "entertainment" for visiting royalty. The real flowering time of this dramatic form is yet to come; Jonson, Campion, Dekker and the rest did most of their work under James I, and Inigo Jones and Carew and Milton come later yet. It was with these that I hope to deal, though very inadequately, in a following paper.

tion—and I had nowhere to go. There had been much talk of Helena coming down to her uncles and it was all arranged, but at the last moment she decided to go to Canada with her parents. Before she went, she proposed this scheme to me and insisted that I should impersonate her as your grandniece.

"It was a great temptation to me to come down here—and so I came. You know the rest—and if you want to send for the police, you may! But you have been wonderfully kind to me and I don't believe Helena Strang could love you more than I do! So there!"

She rose and faced them with tearful eyes and trembling lips.

"Dear me," coughed Uncle Anthony, looking properly distressed.

"Humph—nonsense!" growled Uncle David. "A man may have more than one grandniece, eh boys? Well, Helena Clifton, I'll adopt you as my niece here and now! I like you!" He held out his arms and Helena promptly accepted their protection.

"It's my turn now," reminded Uncle Benjamin, rather jealously.

After Helena had cried a little on each kindly shoulder, and still blushing divinely, and with a pathetic quaver in her voice, she resumed: "I have promised to marry Jack Lyman, uncles. I told him all about it and he said it didn't matter in the least, so we are engaged—"

PROSPERITY CAUSE OF GIRLS' FALLS

CHICAGO, May 15.—One year of prosperity causes 25,000 girls to become immoral, according to Dr. Albert E. Mowrey, professor of social disease at the College of Medicine here.

Immortality among women, he said today, has increased at the rate of 25,000 cases a year for the last twenty years, the increase being directly attributable to the prosperity of those years. Cigarettes, automobiles, dances, modern wearings of apparel and jewelry are the principal causes, Dr. Mowrey declared.

Daddy's Bedtime

Story—The Rocking Horse That Wasn't

Contented.

"ONCE there was a rocking horse that wasn't in the least contented," began daddy.

"But, daddy, how is a rocking horse going to know whether he is contented or not?" demanded Jack.

"Well, we can pretend that this rocking horse knew whether he was contented or not, can't we?" asked daddy. "This rocking horse was one of the prettiest rocking horses that ever rocked, I believe. He was dapple gray in color, and he had a fine white wavy tail and a mane to match. And he had a couple of lovely eyes painted in for him, with which he could see all around. For there were no blinders painted over them to obscure his sight. And in the summer time the children used to take him out to rock on the green grass, and in the winter time they would ride on him in the house, where it was always warm and comfy. And he ought to have been the happiest rocking horse you ever saw, but I am afraid that he wasn't."

"For this rocking horse, like some other animals and like some children sometimes, got all snarly and complainy. You see, he got that way through watching live horses. And one time when there was nobody around to hear he voiced his complaint something like this:

"What good am I? he snarled. 'I am only a rocking horse, not a live one. Look at those live horses on the road. They trot along with carriages hitched to them, and there are people in the carriages, and the horses get somewhere. And they seem to enjoy the exercise. And other horses gallop along with people sitting on them. And those horses get somewhere too."

"But look at me. The children sit on me, and they tell me to 'giddyap.' And what do I do? I don't get anywhere. I just rock and rock and rock, always sticking right in the same place, and I don't get anywhere. And those horses eat oats and hay, they tell me. And I can't eat at all. What good is it being a rocking horse anyway?"

"So that's the way the little rocking horse snarled. Wasn't it awful, children? It was during the summer when the rocking horse rocked on the grass. "Along came the winter, and the rocking horse was in the nursery. And his pretty painted eyes saw some sights that made him a wiser rocking horse."

"He saw live horses telling through snow and wallowing in mud, and it didn't seem so nice, after all. And once he saw a poor old live-horse being beaten by a man."

"Well," said he, "I guess there are worse fates than being a rocking horse. And after that he was more contented."

of the first occasion on which to base its belief in the genuineness of the opportunity.
The value of the plan to buyer and seller lies in this: the consumer has the merchant's closer knowledge of his goods and larger buying experience to assure him of the best article or combination of articles representing the value of his dollar; the merchant has the increased volume of trade—the quick turn-over which is held essential to profitable retailing.
For this reason The TRIBUNE can advise its readers in good faith not to neglect the opportunity offered by the second Dollar Day. Advertising of the values to be offered will start in the papers on Monday. To those concerned in expending their money wisely, next Monday's paper will be of practical interest.

AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION

It may be suggested that the United States might well have paved the way for its attempt to secure cessation of the German submarine policy, three months ago, by a federal order prohibiting steamship companies under the registry of belligerent nations taking passengers in American ports upon vessels carrying any class of merchandise excepting personal baggage. Then, no matter under what government's interpretation, the question of contraband could not have arisen and such a vessel's destruction could have had absolutely no purpose other than the destruction of the non-combatant passengers. Had that been done the present situation would have left this government in a position impregnable even from the German viewpoint with the advantageous probability that the situation would not have been created.

THE SECOND DOLLAR DAY

Early in March the merchants of La Crosse tried an experiment. They advertised a Dollar Day, on which each dealer took thought to present to his customers the best possible values he could furnish for the fixed sum of one dollar. The result was surprisingly successful, and mutually pleasing to the merchants and their customers.
Inspired by the success of the initial experiment, it is proposed by the merchants to make Dollar Day a quarterly institution. The second one of this year comes next Wednesday. That it will be more of a success than the first is not hard to predict, for not only are the merchants going into it with more assurance of the real value of the plan, but the buying public has the experience

LITTLE PIMPLES ON CHILD'S FACE

Itched and Child Scratched. Could Not Leave Them Alone. Something Terrible. Used Cuticura. In a Month Child Was Healed.

Merle Beach, Mich.—"My little daughter was nearly two years old when she had little pimples come on her face. It was just a little red bunch when it first started. I think they must have itched for she would scratch them until they would get to be large sores, nearly as large as a ten-cent piece. It seemed as if the poor girl could not leave them alone; if we held her hands she would try to rub her face on something else. It was just terrible.
"I used most everything I could think of and nothing would help her. I decided to get Cuticura Soap and Ointment and before I had used them one week I could see they were healing. Before a month was up you would never know the child had ever had any sores on her face." (Signed) Mrs. Lewis White, June 22, 1914.

Their faces were close together. The glow of their cigarettes burned up between them, and they looked each other in the eyes.
"I heard," Gotz said. "I know enough English to understand your bargain. That gang of scoundrels must have loved you, Nameless."
There was no answer. Gotz dropped down quietly by his companion's side, and for a moment both men smoked in silence. Then a hand was stretched out and touched Farquhar's with an almost feminine gentleness.
"Is there anything I can do for you—when we get back? Any message?"
"Yes—I should be grateful. Will you go to Madame Arnaud? Ask for her companion—a Miss Smith—a little countrywoman of mine. Will you tell her—how it happened?"
"Everything?"
"Everything. She has a right to know, she had—a strange faith in me. It made many things possible. Tell her that."
"I promise you, Nameless."
Farquhar bowed his head for a moment.
"Tell her the mirage was not so splendid as the truth."
"Will she understand?"
"Yes, I think she will understand."
Again silence. They smoked their cigarettes to the end, and then Gotz threw back his shoulders with a dry little laugh.
"Tonight our souls and the world are ours, perhaps for the last time," he said. "Let us put away the realities and dream of our fatherlands, and of the many things we loved and believed in. Let us make a feast together, comrade."
The night deepened with the silence. They had forgotten that their hands were still clasped together. Like children they dreamed old dreams and trod old paths which, starting from distant years and distant scenes, had wound through strange pastures to this lonely tower of death and mystery. The dawn broke, and instinctively their eyes sought the west. Amid the golden clouds drifting up from the horizon the night had built a city of temples and palaces, domed with silver, whose pale ethereal minarets and glowing cupolas reached up into the translucent light of morning. For a minute or two it brightened, the slender outlines strengthening almost to reality—then faded—and as the sun rose passed wholly into the vacant day.
"Mirage!"
Gotz rose slowly and stiffly.
"The feast is over," he said. He pointed then to something moving swiftly over the wide sweep of plain. "Colonel Destin calculated within the hour," he said. "There are the chasseurs."
The hundred men cowering in the sand-valley beneath had also seen. They scrambled to their feet and primed their choked, half-useless weapons in a paroxysm of reawakened despair. Farquhar passed them with a curt command.
"Ground arms!" They hesitated, their bloodshot eyes seeking his in silent horror and incredulity. "You have my word, comrades," he said. "If you trust me, obey me."
They obeyed. They did not understand. Somewhere in their stupefied brains there was the ugly thought that they had been bought and sold, but the knowledge of thirst and hunger and helplessness was stronger. They waited sullenly.
Before Destin, watching the horizon with moody interest, Farquhar drew himself up to the salute. "The relief is in sight, my Colonel," he said.
The elder man nodded without turning. The night had ravaged his hard face with lines of age and suffering. His eyes were haggard and red-rimmed from long vigil, and in the carriage of the upright figure there was a new weariness. Silent, side by side, the two men watched the cavalcade ride gaily over the softly radiant plain of gold. All trace of devastation and death was painted out; a warm tender life flowed toward them on waves of sunlight.
"Colonel Destin!"
A major rode out in front of his troops, and Destin advanced slowly to meet him. They shook hands together.
"I feared the worst," the Frenchman said cordially. "Captain Arnaud told me that Ali-Mahomed was attacking, and that you were terribly weakened. It seemed impossible to hope."

"Ali-Mahomed is dead," Destin replied curtly. "The rising is broken."
"I congratulate you, Colonel. France will know how to thank you."
Destin smiled wryly.
"The thanks are not mine. The success is not mine. The troops were not under my command. Congratulate this—this gentleman, Major."
There was a little silence, broken by the soft clamping of horses and the rustle of arms. The hundred legionaries stood hunched together, fingering their rifles, their faces ugly with sullen hatred. The Frenchman glanced from them to Destin and from Destin to Farquhar standing alone and upright in the full glow of morning. A faint smile shadowed his yellow features.
"Ah, yes, I understand," he said. "You have had other difficulties. A touch of the Legion's 'cafard'?" He turned and beckoned to a couple of troopers. "Irons!" he commanded simply.
A movement like a gust of wind through gaunt and leafless trees passed over the hundred. It died away, leaving a blank and terrible apathy. They had understood—but too late. Farquhar held out his hands.
Ten minutes later the remnant of the First Regiment was on the march northward. A troop of chasseurs rode gaily on either hand. They laughed and chatted over the heads of the bedraggled herd of legionaries, and their voices sounded loud in the waste of silence. Now and again a taunt and a threat mingled with their jests. But the hundred did not hear. They marched doggedly, their heads bowed, shirking one another's eyes. With every stride they heard the clank of a chain dragged through the dull sand. As the hours passed it became deafening in their ears. The sound filled the whole earth.

smiled down into her face, upturned and brilliantly lovely in its sheer ecstasy of living.
"Nobody would think you had a husband somewhere out there in the desert," he said. "Aren't you ever afraid?"
She laughed a little.
"One gets accustomed to things," she said lightly. "After a time one ceases to worry. It does no good. Fate decides."

SOMBRE COLORS TO RULE IN FALL

CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 15.—Sombre colors will predominate in women's apparel next fall according to bits of information leaking from behind closed doors where the style committee of the National Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' association started a two days' convention today.

"War in Europe is cutting down the supply of dyes imported from German plants," was given as the explanation by Joseph Prince, of Cincinnati, chairman of the committee. Hints that skirts will be long next fall are also floating around.

"Made in America" fashions will become a reality, due to the war, although many French ideas have been secured and are being presented.

NO PEACE THIS YEAR SAYS BAN

Johnson Denies Reports of Truce Between the Feds and O. B. Forces

BY JAMES O'DEA

(Written for the United Press.)

CHICAGO, May 15.—Again will we bury the much heralded peace between O. B. and the Feds. And this time, according to Ban Johnson, the shovelers can begin throwing the dirt on the casket while the sorrowing army of O. B. fans with measured tread marches slowly away to the tune of Jim Gilmore's funeral dirge.

Returned from a swing around the eastern wheel, the American league head was in Chicago today, denying all sorts of peace rumors and prophesying a grand season for his league, all in the same breath.

WITNESSES C. O. D.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 15.—The Roosevelt-Barnes libel trial, it developed today, has revealed a new type of witness. He is known as the C. O. D. variety. Several ex-legislators have refused to take the stand before the mileage fee of .08 per mile and attendance fees of 50 cents were paid by the Barnes attorneys.

WEDDING RINGS

Every wedding ring we have in stock is made partly by expensive machinery and finished by skilled workmen. In this way a perfect, seamless, jointless and solderless ring is produced. The numerous rolling and hammering operations hardens the gold so much more than is possible in any other manner of manufacture, that the rings we offer for sale will hardly show any noticeable wear in 25 years' time.

22 karat, 18 karat, 14 karat. The finest wedding rings it is possible to make at a price no higher than is charged for inferior ones.

ANNUAL JUNIOR PROM

With everything at its best, a cool night, good music and a good floor, the annual junior prom last night may be considered one of the best in years. Sixty-five couples were present at the affair and all were unanimous in declaring the decorations and all else immense. The hall was decorated with tamarack branches, which were made into booths along the sides of the room. Inside the booths were placed easy chairs and couches making an ideal place to rest. The hall was further decorated with colored streamers which were strung across the room breaking the full force of the bright light and leaving shadowy places here and there.

At 8:30 Principal B. E. McCormick and Mrs. McCormick, Earl Hirsch and Harriet Scott, led the grand march, in which everyone took part. The program of twenty-one number ended before 12 o'clock. Lemon ice and small cakes were served as refreshments.

EDITH MATHISON MAKES SCREEN DEBUT

Edith Wynne Mathison, the celebrated international dramatic star who makes her first appearance on the film in the Lasky-Belasco picture of "The Governor's Lady," one of the foremost of Mr. Belasco's legitimate productions, is undoubtedly the most famous artist yet enrolled in the list of photodramatic workers.

Some of Miss Mathison's very important New York engagements have been in "The Servant in the House," which was written by her husband, Charles Rann Kennedy, and in such productions as "Sister Beatrice," "The Piper" and Shakespeare's "A Winter's Tale" at the "New Theater." She has recently appeared under the management of Charles Frohman, and at the Fine Arts Theater in Chicago.

Miss Mathison states that she is especially gratified that she is to make her screen debut in a Belasco play of current American life. She considers that the title role of "The Governor's Lady," with its unusual pathetic appeal and its poignant dramatic elements, is especially suited to her form of art. Showing at the Bijou Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, May 16, 17 and 18.

BOATS MUST DIVORCE ROADS

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The interstate commerce commission today held that all steamship lines on the great lakes must be divorced from the railroads which have been operating them.

The commission rendered its decision on an application the railroads made, under the Panama canal act, for an extension of time during which they might retain their interest in the great lakes vessel lines. Each petitioner's application was denied effective December 1. The lines affected were:

Railroads—Pennsylvania, Lehigh Valley, New York Central, Rutland, Erie, Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, and Grand Trunk of Canada. Vessel lines—Anchor, Lehigh Valley Transit, Mutual Transit, Western Transit, Rutland Transit, Erie R. R. Lake line, and Canadian Atlantic Transit.

There is an oil well near Calgary, in western Canada, that yields an extraordinary oil, as clear as water, containing 72 per cent of benzine and capable of being used crude in the engine of a motor car.

SPOTLIGHTS

"OLE THE SWEDS DETECTIVE"

Al E. Markham, one of the best known Swede comedians will appear at the La Crosse Theater twice next Sunday, presenting his own comedy, "Ole, The Swede Detective." The play is a three act melodramatic comedy abounding in amusing situations and built to amuse. Specialties between the acts. Special Sunday prices.

MISS ROSE STAHL

Miss Rose Stahl, who will appear here in her new comedy, "A Perfect Lady," enjoys the distinction of having been one of the first American players to make a genuine success in England. Miss Stahl first went abroad with her sketch under the name of "The Chorus Girl," then after it had been made into a four act play, and Miss Stahl had gained stellar honors at home, the late Henry B. Harris sent her to London in it and she was the rage of the town.

La Crosse Theater, Tuesday, May 18.

"OUTCAST"

In the London and New York success, "Outcast," and supported by the identical company which appeared with her during the six months run of this play in the latter city, Elsie Ferguson comes to the La Crosse Theater Friday, May 21.

"Outcast" is the work of Hubert Henry Davies, an English dramatist who was responsible for "Cousin Kate" and "The Mollusc," among other plays, and is in four acts. The time is the present. The principal characters are Miriam, an American girl, who finds herself bankrupt in London, which character is played by Miss Ferguson, and Geoffrey, a handsome young broker who has had an unfortunate love affair and with whom Miriam falls in love. Their positions in life are quite different, as the man has money and a position in society, while Miriam is what the play's title would suggest. "The other woman" in the case, as may be surmised, makes her appearance and the story has to do with the heart entanglements of these three. If there are occasional tears, there is also plenty of laughter, for it is hard to conceive Mr. Davies neglecting his opportunities in that direction.

BABY HALTS PRODUCTION

Little Runa Hodges, especially engaged to play the child in the William Fox production of Porter Emerson Browne's striking drama of a siren and her victim "A Fool There Was," which served Robert Hilliard as his most noteworthy success, is very small; but very important. So much so is fact that when taking the Florida scenes in the play she was responsible for a whole day's delay in the production while she attended, as the guest of honor, a children's lawn party at the beautiful home of Dr. James Knight at St. Augustine, Fla.

"A Fool There Was" will be at the Majestic four days starting Sunday.

WATCHING THE SCOREBOARD

BY HAL SHERIDAN

(Written for the United Press.)

Dispatches from Brooklyn indicate the Dodgers spent a weary day dodging base hits. It was quite a large day for the robins, the Cubs making 23 base hits, for a total of 35 bases, and scoring 19 runs.

Ever since Charlie Herzog got a bust in the nose, he has been kicked around. Now, even the Giants can trim his crew.

If Gabby Graven doesn't lay off our homer column, he's going to bust up our league.

Stallings got a dose of his own bitters when he was forced to sit on the bench and watch the Cards come from behind, overcome a four run lead and bat out a victory in the ninth.

Those Whales of Tinker's also broke up a perfectly good game in the last round by batting out six runs.

Yesterday was a fat day for the batters. The Brookfeds fell on the offerings of a brace of Balto pitchers for 16 blows.

The National commission said Benny Kauf wasn't a fit person to play with O. B., differing in opinion with about seven club owners.

HOT ANSWER FOR BANK PLOT CHARGE

McAdoo Says Government Took Funds from Riggs Concern Because of Speculative Loans

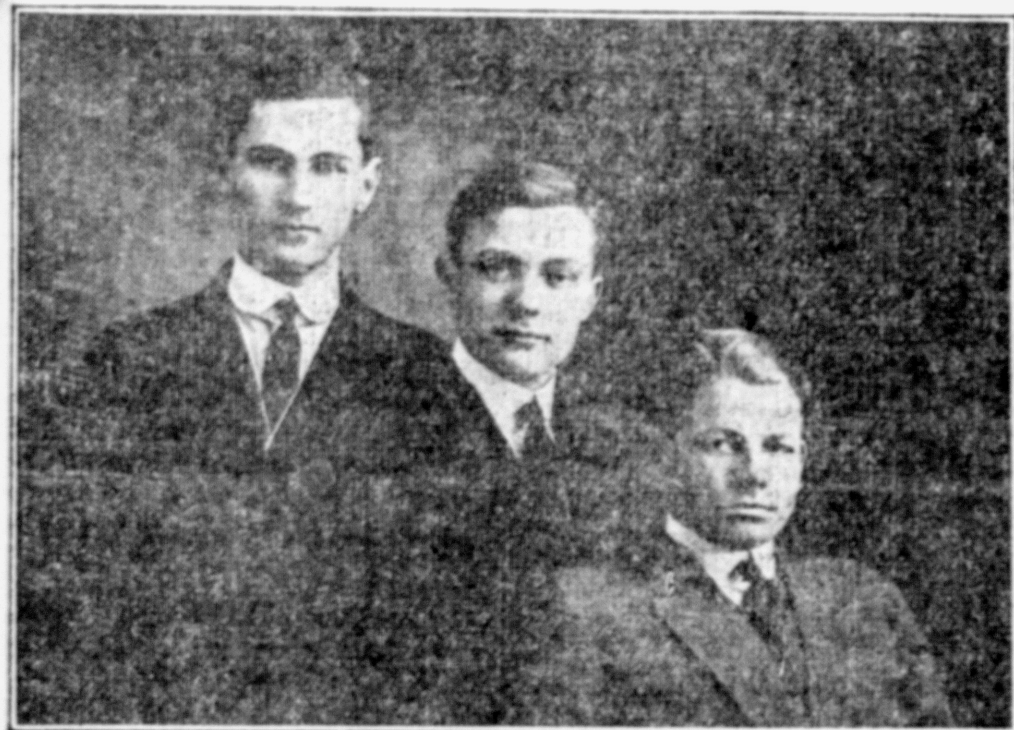

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The government this afternoon filed in the district supreme court a red-hot answer to the conspiracy charge made by the Riggs National Bank of Washington against Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, Comptroller of Currency Williams and United States Treasurer Burke.

Concerning the withdrawal of general government funds from the Riggs, McAdoo says that the Riggs bank did a small commercial business and it was desired that the government funds should be in banks that would loan them for commercial, rather than for speculative purposes.

CALEDONIA HIGH SCHOOL WINS MINNESOTA STATE DEBATE CHAMPIONSHIP FROM ST. PAUL HIGH

CALEDONIA, Minn., May 15.—(Special.)—By their victory last night over the strong Humboldt high school debating team of St. Paul, the Caledonia high school debating team became for the third successive time state champions of Minnesota, through a unanimous decision of the judges.

The debate, which was the final in a series between thirty-seven schools throughout Minnesota, was held in the law auditorium of the University of Minnesota. The subject was: "Government Ownership and Operation of Telegraph and Telephone." Caledonia having the negative side of the argument.

The Caledonia team was composed of Robert Jennings, Harold Medicus and Henry Wisland. By a systematic process of elimination, all the schools in the state had been defeated except Humboldt and Caledonia. Humboldt had previously met and defeated two schools, thereby becoming champions of two congressional districts.

Wins in Five Districts
Caledonia, on the other hand, has recently met and defeated Mabel, Lanesboro and Chatfield, in the first district; Redwood Falls, champions of the seventh district; Hastings,

LITTLE GIRLS' BAND SERENADES TRIBUNE

About two hundred persons gathered on Fifth street in front of the TRIBUNE office this afternoon as the Moulis girls' band gave its first public concert—which also was the first band concert of the season, in a serenade to the TRIBUNE.

Twenty-three little girls, from the ages of eleven to fourteen—totally hardly able to lift the huge horns, played real music. Two selections were rendered, and the faces of the listeners showed marvel at the volume of tone that the little girls drew from their horns.

One little girl played a drum bigger than herself, while another held a big brass horn in her arms and tooted away.

Arthur Bakkum, who has been at the club for nine years, will have charge of the locker rooms.

Many of the members of the club expected today to attend the opening dinner. During the afternoon, the links were crowded with golfers and caddies, the members taking advantage of the half holiday. They remained on the course throughout the afternoon except when driven to shelter by threatened showers.

action the king has taken, following the resignation of the Salandra ministry were circulated in Rome today. The king, it is known, at first refused to accept the resignation of Premier Salandra but when the latter became insistent, called in Signor Morcocco, president of the chamber of deputies, and asked him to form a new cabinet.

Morocco today was in conference with his associates in the chamber and it was reported he would accept. Salandra was again closeted with the king and there was a rumor that he would reconsider his resignation if the king took an immediate stand for war.

According to Giornale d'Italia, the final act of the Salandra cabinet was the denunciation of part of the triple alliance treaty binding Italy to Germany and Austria. This step, the newspaper said, was taken to leave Italy free to declare war without delay.

France Sure of Italian Aid
(BY WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS)
PARIS, May 15.—France confidently expects Italy will declare war against Austria before the Italian chamber meets next week. With one accord government officials here blame German intrigues for the crisis in Rome and the resignation of the Salandra cabinet.

"But Germany's machinations will fail," a high official told me today. "Mark my words. The new Italian cabinet, whoever its leader, will be a war cabinet and will declare war before five days have passed."

For the moment Parisians have forgotten their own war. All eyes are turned toward Italy. The French communiques, telling of fresh successes around Arras, are read only after the bulletins from Rome have been devoured.

The opinion is universal here that Germany is now playing her last and most desperate card. The belief is that Germany, unable to induce Italy to join the triple alliance, is now determined to frustrate Italy's plans to join the allies at any cost.

"German diplomats are secretly stirring up all the trouble in Italy," the French official told me. "If possible, they plan to disrupt the country by civil war to keep out of the war."

SATAN SANDERSON SEEN AT CASINO

As a fitting production with which to inaugurate its new program of all feature pictures, the Casino selected the B. A. Rolfe screen play, "Satan Sanderson," in which the prominent stage star, Orrin Johnson, well known for his work in "The Marriage Game," "The Confession," and other Broadway successes, makes his first screen appearance.

"Satan Sanderson," based on the novel and play of the same name, tells the story of a wayward son, a loving girl, an indulgent father and retribution in one of its varied forms. It brings into play the powerful dramatic ability of the star and the superb cast and its many delicate scenes, poignant situations and virile climaxes, combine to make this one of the really attractive photoplay productions of the day. "Satan Sanderson," with Orrin Johnson and Irene Warfield, comes to the Casino Monday and Tuesday.

MORSE LIBEL SUIT READY FOR JURY MONDAY MORNING

Plaintiff in Testimony Today Fails to Show Keeler Wrote "Who's Who" or Who Mailed It

The $50,000 slander suit of Alfred Leslie Morse against Benjamin F. Keeler, state deputy of the Modern Woodmen of America, will not go to the jury until Monday morning.

Practically all testimony was finished on both sides of the argument at noon today, when court adjourned.

Attorney P. W. Mahoney, representing Morse, failed to show that the "Who's Who and Why" pamphlet, mailed by Morse, had been received from the "head office" of the insurance company, and the plaintiff also failed to show that Keeler had nothing to do with writing the pamphlet, which maintained that Morse mistreated his family.

The deposition of Mrs. Morse, divorced, and now residing in Kansas, said Morse had a Congregational church charge at Necedah, that she had been forced to take alms from citizens of that place and that Morse had been asked to resign from the pastorate of the church.

Mrs. Morse's affidavit said Morse had threatened to kill her and his family.

"YES" OR "NO" IS WILSON EXPECTATION

the meantime. In the case of the president and his cabinet, this policy will be complete. Other officials who are closely watching the situation do not feel the same obligation, though naturally they cannot talk for publication.

Opinion seems about equally divided as to the outcome. Officials devoted to the so-called "big army and big navy movement" openly assert that Germany must contentiously reject the American demands. They say the president erred in not leaving an optional clause in his note.

Others do not take this pessimistic view. Among them are the men who have been closely following the over-sea developments. They say that Germany has it in her power, if she will, to settle the rights of her position for all time. Their view is that, because of the intimate friendly relations between the two countries, Germany can be expected to exhaust every means to prevent an open rupture and point out that the precedents America has established will fit well into Germany's plans, if this is her desire.

Here is the solution that these officials suggest:

Germany can accept the concrete American suggestion. She can announce that, in the interests of friendship, and because she feels she is right, she will suspend indefinitely her submarine warfare against all passenger-carrying vessels. Then she will demand that all issues raised by the United States be submitted to a competent arbitration court. The United States, Germany can point out, is on record as declaring first that "there can be no last word between friends" and secondly that "there can be no justification in refused mediation and arbitration when that course is honorably open." On that record these officials believe the United States will be compelled to consider arbitration should Germany ask it.

Neutrals Shield for Contraband?

In submitting the whole submarine warfare problem, in so far as it affects neutrals' rights, to arbitration, most international experts think Germany will have the advantage. They say the German position has been that nearly every passenger liner bound for Britain passes her hold jammed with war munitions and that to insure this contraband's safety women and children are carried. It has been felt these passengers made the vessel safe, or as a man close to the German embassy today put it:

"Germany has been accused of placing non-combatants, especially women and children, in the front ranks to protect her troops. This we deny. But we have claimed, and we do claim, that the allies have made it a point to get as many women and children as they could above decks on ammunition-carrying boats, believing that their presence deterred our submarine commanders from acting. If ever we are given the opportunity of demonstrating this before a neutral body we have unlimited evidence to prove that our claims are true."

It is conceded that Germany will at least go through the form of consulting her allies, Austria and Turkey, before replying to the United States. Austria is very friendly to the United States and Ambassador Morgenthau has powerful influence with the leaders of the Young Turks in Constantinople. Because of this it is believed these two nations will advise a conciliatory attitude toward America. This fact, coupled with the knowledge that outside the purely military officials that the majority of Germany in authority do not want any more enemies arrayed against the fatherland, has materially lessened the tension in official Washington.

raised by a special school tax levy, and that a similar sum be placed in the budget for 1916 to be raised in the same manner. It was referred.

A communication from D. W. MacWillie of the Wisconsin Pearl Button company aroused the ire of the north side alderman. Mr. MacWillie, who has been in controversy with the city over the obstruction of the La Crosse river and the alleged charge that he has occupied lands beyond the established water line of the stream, called the attention of the council to an obstruction of 163 feet below the La Crosse river wagon.

"MacWillie is looking for trouble, and he'll get it," shouted the alderman. "He is going to get it. He has it in for me because I caught him trying to steal a portion of the La Crosse river. He now is occupying the whole of Sixth street at Zeisler street illegally. If the city council won't get after MacWillie, I will!"

Mr. Mahoney introduced a resolution which was passed, instructing the city engineering department and board of public works to look into the alleged occupancy of Sixth street by the button man.

Only Three Cops on North Side

Alderman Schulze complained that there are but three policemen stationed in North La Crosse, and as one of these has been assigned to duty at the rubber mills, the police protection of that side of the city has dwindled to two men. He asked that another patrolman be assigned to North La Crosse. His petition was referred.

Complaint that the Milwaukee railroad crossing at Mill street is frequently blocked by trains for a longer interval than five minutes in violation of ordinance, was made by Alderman Schulze, who asked that the police department take steps to enforce the ordinance. The petition was referred.

Police Sergeant John Wendling was ordered paid $359.52 back salary and court costs of $87.25 to cover his litigation and back pay for the time he was suspended from police duty under an erroneous action of the police and fire commission. An appropriation of $850 was voted to pay for Chief Bradford's new Overland roadster, to be used by the fire department.

The engineering department was ordered to prepare plans and specifications for paving the approaches to the Rose street viaduct and approach.

ARMY OF JOBLESS HEADS FOR STATES

Three Thousand Austrians from Winnipeg Are Halfway to American Border

The main body is about five miles behind. They are expected to reach Emerson tomorrow. Soldiers of Canada and immigration officers of the United States are mingling with them in an unsuccessful attempt to get them to turn back. Another body of more than a thousand Austrians are finishing preparations to start for the states late this afternoon.

This was the declaration of officials here today concerning the reported attempted immigration of 3,000 unemployed Austrians.

MISS ANNA OTT CHRISTENS LAUNCH

Emil Ljepke's new 40 foot Richmond launch, which has been named the "Margaret L." was put in the water for the first time Thursday and was christened with proper ceremonies, amid a party of enthusiastic admirers.

Miss Anna Ott presided over the ceremonies which were held at the docks at the foot of Division street, and in breaking a bottle of champagne over her bow wished her "bon voyage" on her journey for life.

The La Crosse Bridge company was paid the $600 bill for work done on the West Channel bridge, which has been in dispute for several years. Three hundred dollars were appropriated for improvements at the public baths. CHICAGO, May 15.—Cable reports that were unexpectedly strong and reports of damage made wheat stronger at today's opening, when prices showed overnight advances of 1/4, 1/2 and 1/4. Selling on the bulge caused early recessions from the opening. Then later came more optimistic reports in the shape of a government report. Still later there were fluctuations which tended downward, leaving prices at the close 1/4, 1/2 and 3/4 lower than they were at the opening.

Moderate but steady buying made corn prices higher today. At the opening, overnight changes of up 1/4

B. F. SALZER DIES AT WESTERN HOME; WELL KNOWN HERE

Former La Crosse Man Once President of Seed Company, Expires After Long Illness

Benjamin Franklin Salzer, formerly of La Crosse, died yesterday at his home in Denver, Colo., according to word received yesterday morning by relatives in La Crosse. He was 68 years old.

Mr. Salzer was born in La Crosse March 11, 1857. He was educated in the public schools of the city and at Galena College, Galena, Ill. He became connected with the Salzer Seed company of this city, serving as president of the concern for four years before his removal to Colorado in 1891.

The Salzer Lumber company was organized in 1895, with which Mr. Salzer was connected up to his death. He was elected president of the Central Savings bank in 1901, besides serving for six years as a trustee of the University of Denver. In 1902 he was

Hundreds Voluntarily Surrender Following Announcement They Are to Be Interned

LONDON, May 15.—Hundreds of enemy aliens of military age, most of them Germans, voluntarily surrendered themselves at police stations in London today, following the government's announcement that they are to be interned.

All day they streamed into the stations. Practically all carried their baggage. It was planned this afternoon to quarter them temporarily in hotels and large halls tonight until the home secretary decides upon a camp where they may be sent. It was considered probably today that Isle of Man in the Irish sea will be chosen.

"Whys" of Moves
in European War

NEW YORK, May 15.—The suddenly developed cabinet crisis at Rome suggests the chances are now against Italy entering the war. The government has not felt itself strong enough to begin hostilities, and Premier Salandra has offered his resignation to the king for the purpose of bringing pressure of public opinion to bear in his favor.

The cabinet has apparently reached the conclusion that promises can be obtained from the allies sufficient to guarantee Italy's future possession of the eastern shores of the Adriatic. There has developed however a strong objection to Italy fighting for the Adriatic, when she can obtain territorial compensation from Austria for remaining neutral. This divergence of views has brought about the ministerial resignation.

Efforts are being made to fix responsibility upon ex-Premier Giolitti for Italy's public declaration of divided councils. Signor Giolitti's position is somewhat like that of Col. Roosevelt's during the Taft administration. He has wide popularity throughout Italy and his prestige causes his advice to be sought frequently by the king. Giolitti is opposed to Italy's bellicosity. He believes that if Italy were to go to war and seize Austria's Adriatic coast line there would be a second war of revenge by the Teutonic nations. The ex-premier has reached the conclusion that in this second war Italy could not rely on help from the present allies, and would have to defend herself alone. There would be a serious danger that the war would end in a broken Italy, with Austria master once more of Istria and Dalmatia, and of much present Italian territory as well.

This argument has exercised a strong influence upon the king of Italy. If Giolitti's prediction were to come true, it is highly probable a revolution would follow Italy's dismemberment and the house of Savoy would be overthrown. The king, therefore, risks his throne if Giolitti's advice is not followed.

On the other hand, the king has been publicly warned, notably by Guglielmo Ferrero, the famous Italian historian, that if Italy keeps the peace, there will be growing resentment after the war is over, which will force his majesty's abdication. Ferrero's argument is based on his belief that large numbers of Italians are non-interventionists now solely because they cannot see the splendid opportunity a war will afford Italy to expand. After the chance has been missed, the people will understand better and will hold the king responsible.

Thus, King Victor is facing a dilemma. The future of his royal house is possibly at stake, and this makes it certain he will give the final decision to peace or war himself. The fact that he has permitted the cabinet crisis to occur, suggests, while it does not certify, that his majesty has decided against the risks of war.

Just Like a Boy.

The teacher was having an interesting half hour with the children, asking them questions, anyone having the privilege to answer. It was a great time to show off. The teacher asked about various things, and one question was about locusts. Several hands were raised, and finally one boy was selected to speak. "A locust is a bug that gives people tuberculosis," was his answer.

LACROSSE PREPARES
WELCOME FOR BIRDS

Elaborate Plans for the Entertainment of State Meet of Eagles Are Now Almost Complete

Eagledom in Wisconsin is going to be given a very pleasant surprise when the state convention comes to La Crosse during the week of June 21.

Elaborate plans for the entertainment of 20,000 visitors are almost complete, and it will be understood that in a city whose usual population is but 30,000, that the laying of these plans requires skill and perseverance. There are committees to take care of every possible phase of the situation, and any visitor to La Crosse who is not well taken care of will have only himself to blame.

The finding of suitable accommodations has already been taken care of, and there will be ample accommodations for all who come. La Crosse residents have thrown their doors wide open to the visitors, and not only in the hotels but in the private residences of the city will there be a hearty welcome to the Eagle and his friends and family.

Save Baby From Gorilla.

According to Doctor Livingstone, the gorilla sometimes picks up a negro baby and carries it about. The natives rescue it in rather an ingenious way. They place a large bunch of bananas in the way of the gorilla, which seizes them with both hands and lets the baby drop. Had the baby been one of its own kind it would have clung to its nurse. But, being a human baby, it naturally falls, so that the rescuers can drive away the animal and carry off their prize.

PLAN IS DRAFTING FOR WORLD COURT

Wilson's Note to Kaiser Stirs International Law Congress to Speed Up Action

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 15.—The relations between the United States and Germany made clear in President Wilson's note today spurred the resolutions committee of the world court congress to rush completion of its draft for a world court of justice.

Early today leaders in the congress got together to discuss the note given Germany by the United States. The resolutions committee, comprising experts in several fields, will consider several alternate plans of action for establishment of a world court, and will recommend one for adoption by the congress.

The text of the plan finally agreed upon is to go to the ruler of every nation in the world.

"CROOKED ALLIANCE"
FOR JURY TO DECIDE

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 15.—William Barnes was not corrupt in his opposition to certain legislation but it remains for the jury to determine whether the plaintiff in the $50,000 libel suit, against ex-President Theodore Roosevelt made use of an alliance between crooked politics and crooked business in the matter of campaign contributions and whether there was an improper alliance with the democrats in the election of a United States senator. In 1911, so Justice Andrews told the jury at the conclusion of the direct examination of Barnes today.

MOPPY TO AFFORD PASTIME ON LOCAL GROUNDSTOMORROW

Rushford Will Be Here with Special Train; Nelsons and Trainmen Play Out of the City

Sunday will be a busy day for local teams, if old Jupiter Pluvius doesn't stick in and spoil the pastime.

For La Crosse fans a deluxe performance is promised by Moppy Anderson and his tribe of Rushford sluggers who come here for a game with the Athletics at league park. It is reported that Rushford is sending a special train for the event to root for Moppy in his tilt against his former teammates.

Manager Krause has announced an altered lineup for the game tomorrow. Weeks will catch in place of Satek, who suffered a split finger last Sunday in the game against the Trainmen. "Lump" Weissie will be on first base with Krause in right field. Grounds will take Horne's place at short, Horne being out of the game with injuries. Ray Lovvoid will occupy Layman's place in left field.

The Nelsons go to Bangor tomorrow for the first big game of the year for the little town. The club there is reputed for its slugging abilities and is looked to give Comeau's men a run for their money.

Harvey Boyle takes his Trainmen to Onalaska tomorrow for a mix with the Onacros. The team is on edge since their victory over the Athletics last Sunday and are prepared to hand the Onalaskans a drubbing. Fitzki will be in the box.

Introducing the 1915
Lightweight Indian

FOR those riders who enjoy the advantages of good roads and who seek a machine splendidly adapted for such riding, we suggest the big 1915 Innovation—the Lightweight Little Twin

Indian Motorcycle

The introduction of this machine to the United States is the outcome of a persistent demand for a motorcycle possessing the lightweight qualities so popular abroad—a demand created by the completion of thousands of miles of good roads in this country.

But the Lightweight Indian has more than lightness—it has beauty, trimness, "go," combined with those sturdy, comfort, efficiency features which have made the word "Indian" stand for all that is progressive and worth while in motorcycle making.

The new 1915 Catalog—beautifully illustrated—describes the 9 great innovations, 20 refinements, and many important exclusive features of the 1915 Indian.
